Maze of Injustice: The Failure to Protect Indigenous Women from Sexual Violence in the USA (2007)

More than one in three Native American and Alaska Native women are survivors of rape. Most do not seek justice because they know they will be met with inaction or indifference. This report unravels some of the reasons why Indigenous women in the USA are at such high risk of sexual violence and why survivors are so frequently denied justice.

Defending Human Rights in a Changing world (2008)

Who are human rights defenders? Where are the diverse ways in which they defend human rights? What safeguards exist to protect their work? Amnesty International explores these questions, and examines how the human rights agenda continues to evolve as new generations of defenders challenge the conventional interpretation of human rights.

Clouds of injustice. Bhopal disaster 20 years on (2004)

Amnesty International liaised closely with survivors and those working on their behalf in Bhopal to create this report looking back over the 20 years since the Bhopal tragedy through a human rights lens. Of the many complex issues that continue to be thrown up by the gas disaster, the report focuses on:

- the human rights impact of the leak and the contamination;
- corporate accountability for the leak; and
- the responsibility of the Indian state to hold UCC to account and to ensure victims receive adequate compensation and rehabilitation.

Freedom: A Collection of Short Fiction Celebrating the Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Published by Key Porter Books.

An inspiring collection of short stories by prominent authors from all over the world, and an Introduction by Desmond Tutu.

Each story is based on an article of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, breathing life into the document that lays the foundations for human rights law. This beautiful collection challenges us to think about how human rights have an impact in our every day lives.

'Leave us in Peace' – Targeting Civilians in Colombia's Internal Armed Conflict (2008)

This book describes how the lives of millions of Colombians continue to be devastated by a conflict which has now lasted more than 40 years. It also shows that the government's claim that the country is marching resolutely towards peace does not reflect the reality of continued violence for many Colombians.

At the heart of this report are the stories of Indigenous communities decimated by the conflict, of Afro-descendant families expelled from their homes, of women raped and of children blown apart by landmines. The report also bears witness to the determination and resilience of communities defending their right not to be drawn into the conflict.

Claiming rights and resources: injustice, oil and violence in Nigeria (2005)

Ten years after the executions of writer and human rights campaigner Ken Saro-Wiwa and eight Ogoni companions in Nigeria, the peoples of the oil-producing Niger Delta continue to face death and devastation at the hands of the security forces. Oil spills blacken the land and pollute the waterways. Hundreds of gas flares turn the sky sepulchral by day and ablaze at night. Operational practices such as these, so close to people's homes, farms and waterways, would not be tolerated in the countries where the oil companies have their headquarters.

Sudan – Displaced in Darfur: A Generation of Anger (2008)

This report calls for the Sudanese government and the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID) to take action to protect the displaced of Darfur. Only a robust peacekeeping force with a strong mandate to protect civilians in Darfur can significantly improve the lives and prospects of the displaced. How much longer will they have to wait?

Human Rights for Human Dignity: A primer on economic, social and cultural rights (2005)

Hunger, homelessness and preventable disease can no longer be treated as though they were inevitable social ills or solely the product of natural disasters? the are a human rights scandal. Violations of people's economic, social and cultural (ESC) rights can no longer be ignored.

This primer shows what can be achieved by determined campaigning. It makes the case that ESC rights are an integral part of the human rights agenda.

Sex, Love & Homophobia

Written by Vanessa Baird and Published by AIUK

"This book illuminates anew the bleak wasteland that is prejudice. It illuminates more clearly than ever that a loving, understanding humanity is sustained by justice ? Sex, Love and Homophobia is a bright light on the path to justice." Archbishop Desmond Tutu

Sex, Love and Homophobia is for anyone from the age of 17 upwards, whatever their sexual orientation. Its 26 A to Z entries (from "Against Nature" through "XXYY" to "Zapatistas") tackle a complex and controversial issue in easy-to-read chunks. Objective, clear and vividly illustrated throughout, this is a book that informs the reader and enables them to confront prejudice.

Living in the Shadows: a primer on the human rights of migrants (2006)

Living in the Shadows: A primer on the human rights of migrants presents an overview of the rights of migrants. The primer outlines how government policies and practices should protect the human rights of migrants at all stages in the migrations life cycle. It highlights some of the human rights violations that many migrants face, and sets out an agenda for campaigning for migrants' rights.

Persecution and Resistance: The experience of human rights defenders in Guatemala and Honduras (2007)

This report focuses primarily on the risks faced by human rights defenders in Honduras and Guatemala. The pattern of human rights abuses against human rights activists in these countries is widespread, showing no signs of improvement and therefore in need of serious attention by national and international governments. It includes case studies of human rights violations, including killings and attacks, threats and intimidation, against human rights defenders. In many cases those implicated are members of the security forces and, in others, private actors that may be linked to financial interests.
