

Demand the Australian Government ends the secret abuse in Nauru

Tell the Australian Government to end the abuse of people in Nauru.

The Australian Government is forcing 1,200 men, women and children searching for safety in Australia to live in appalling conditions in an Immigration Processing Centre on the small island nation of Nauru. Refugees seeking to enter Australia by boat are denied entry and forced to remain on Nauru while their asylum applications are processed. Those recognized as refugees are denied the opportunity to settle in Australia. People in Nauru remain in what has been described as an open-air prison. The conditions are among some of the worst which have been investigated by Amnesty International.

Self-harm and suicide are not uncommon – with children even as young as nine openly speaking about ending their lives. Women report sexual harassment and assault. People with life threatening health conditions are at times denied adequate medical treatment. Doctors and humanitarian workers could face prison in Australia for speaking out about anything they see while working in Nauru. Facebook is banned on the island, and journalists and human rights monitors are repeatedly denied access.

The Australian Government is deliberately driving adults and even children to the breaking point in order to deter other people from arriving by boat. These refugees have escaped nightmares in conflict ridden countries only to meet with more suffering in the Australian Government-run detention centre on Nauru.

Refugees are simply searching for safety and a welcome place to rebuild their lives. Their suffering on Nauru must stop now.

Demand the Australian Government end the abuse of people seeking safety and freedom.

Call on Australia Immigration Minister Peter Dutton to immediately:

- Close the Regional Processing Centre on Nauru
- Assess all refugee applications in Australia
- Settle in Australia, all people determined to be refugees.

Your Excellency,

I call on Australia to Welcome Refugees.

Over one thousand men, women and children searching for safety in Australia live in appalling conditions on the small island nation of Nauru. Many suffer from serious mental health problems which are inadequately treated and exacerbated by the appalling conditions in which they're forced to live. Anxiety, self-harm and suicide attempts are frequent, with children as young as nine speaking openly about wanting to end their lives.

These people, from countries such as Iran, Iraq, Pakistan, Somalia, Bangladesh, Kuwait, Afghanistan, have fled wars, lost family members and friends and have been tortured by repressive regimes. They are searching for safety and welcome and instead face neglect and suffering.

Australian politicians have been adamant that they will never allow the refugees sent to Nauru to settle in Australia. This punitive approach and systematic abuse in the treatment of asylum seekers and refugees must end.

I demand the Australian Government end the abuse of people seeking safety and freedom and call on you to immediately:

- Close the Regional Processing Centre on Nauru
- Assess all refugee applications in Australia
- Settle in Australia, all people determined to be refugees.
